Bookmania is a serif font with special characters that allow for added personality. When looking at the font from mid to far distance it looks soft and friendly, but when you zoom in close there are hard angles on the serifs and straight edges on the terminals. In contrast there are sweeping curves of the open counters, that bizarrely seem based on the counter of the capital D. A font of contrasts. Reflected in its tone and feel. The exaggerated or elongated curves on the serifs make it look soft from a distance. The serifs add authority and credibility (possibly in the hardness of their shape and their association with traditional type faces). Reflective of a book with straight edges and sharp corners, but softness and flexibility when the page is turned (thanks Abbie).
